HOMELESSNESS AND AFFORDABLE HOUSING IN ALBERTA

A safe, affordable home is essential for people to have a fair chance at dignity, good health and a productive life.

Alberta is experiencing enormous prosperity and economic growth. With this comes many pressures, including an increase in homelessness and a serious shortage of adequate and affordable housing.

Lack of an affordable home or a safe shelter can be a root cause of homelessness for some people, a factor in whether or not a skilled worker decides to stay in Alberta, or a major hurdle for first-time home buyers.

A lot is being done to address these issues in communities across Alberta – but there is more to do.

That's why you are invited to share your ideas with the Alberta Affordable Housing Task Force. We ask you to take the time to read this information, tell us what you think the issues are – but more importantly, tell us what solutions you think will work.

THE ALBERTA AFFORDABLE HOUSING TASK FORCE

The Government of Alberta has appointed the Alberta Affordable Housing Task Force to find innovative and practical ways to make affordable housing more accessible and available to Albertans. The task force will focus on solutions for homelessness and affordable housing, including subsidized rental and home ownership.

This task force brings together representatives from municipalities, business, community leaders, industry associations, political parties, and the non-profit sector to provide a broad base of expertise and knowledge in housing matters.

Chaired by Len Webber, MLA for Calgary-Foothills, the task force will travel to nine Alberta communities in February to meet with key stakeholder organizations and individual Albertans. A final report outlining effective solutions will be presented to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing in March, 2007.

"The Alberta Affordable Housing Task Force was established at the request of the Premier and reflects the priority this government places on affordable housing," said Ray Danyluk, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "I have asked for a report with solutions that are realistic and cost effective, that provide short and long-term solutions to both homelessness and affordable housing - and that will have a positive impact on Alberta's competitiveness, and on the lives of Albertans."

The task force will hold community meetings in Grande Prairie, Fort McMurray, Edmonton, Red Deer, Hinton, Elk Point, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Calgary from February 16 to 28, 2007.

THE ISSUES ARE COMPLEX >>

More than 100,000 Albertans are homeless, and the number is growing. The task force will identify the factors affecting homelessness and affordable housing.

Factors affecting homelessness:

- Domestic and sexual violence
- Special needs
- Physical and mental health and addictions
- Financial support to those in need (rental assistance, food bank, etc.)
- Community supports (counselling, job training, etc.)
- The supply of affordable housing (rental, ownership, etc.)
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market

Factors affecting affordable housing:

- Demographic changes and trends
- The availability of rental units and the rental market
- The availability of land for housing development
- The availability of rental units and the rental market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market
- The impact of the economic downturn on the housing market

In order to develop a comprehensive plan, the task force will identify the factors affecting homelessness and affordable housing, and the impact of the economic downturn on the housing market. The task force will also identify the factors affecting affordable housing, and the impact of the economic downturn on the housing market.

"The Alberta Affordable Housing Task Force was established at the request of the Premier and reflects the priority this government places on affordable housing," said Ray Danyluk, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "I have asked for a report with solutions that are realistic and cost effective, that provide short and long-term solutions to both homelessness and affordable housing - and that will have a positive impact on Alberta's competitiveness, and on the lives of Albertans."

The task force will hold community meetings in Grande Prairie, Fort McMurray, Edmonton, Red Deer, Hinton, Elk Point, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Calgary from February 16 to 28, 2007.

THE ISSUES ARE COMPLEX >>

Many inter-related factors affect homelessness and the supply of affordable housing. To name just a few:

Factors affecting homelessness:

- Poverty and social isolation
- Social attitudes
- Personal crisis, mental health and addictions
- Financial supports to those on fixed incomes or social or disability allowances
- Community supports - ensuring the right services are provided and supported in the right ways
- The supply of shelter beds and emergency shelters - and access for those who need them
- Displacement of low-income people as older, poorer neighbourhoods revitalize
- More transient workers

Factors affecting affordable housing:

- Demographic changes and trends
- The available supply of rental units and single-family homes in each local market
- The availability of land for housing in communities
- Conversions of rental units to condos
- Local vacancy and rental rates
- Costs of building, driven by interest rates, land costs and the supply of labour and trades
- The supply of subsidized housing units available for those on fixed incomes or social or disability allowances
- Municipal issues such as zoning, permits and densities
- Provincial legislation
- Neighbourhoods that say "not in my back yard"

In order to develop solutions, we need to look at how these factors impact each other across the range (or continuum) of housing options and solutions - from shelters for the homeless to transitional housing where people get the supports they need - to subsidized rental options - to affordable market rental - to affordable home ownership.

HERE IS JUST A SNAPSHOT OF WHAT ALBERTA IS FACING

The Pressures of the Fastest Growing Economy in Canada

- Alberta's economy grew by an average of 4.5% in 2005, 5.6% in 2006, and is projected to grow at 4.5% in 2007. (Source – Alberta Economic Development) From 1995 to 2005, Alberta's population grew by 19.9% – twice the rate of the rest of Canada.
- The Government of Alberta's 10-year work force strategy, Building and Educating Tomorrow's Workforce found that Alberta needs 86,000 workers in all sectors today.
- Many communities across the province are trying to manage major population increases. For example, Wood Buffalo is projected to increase its population from 56,111 (June 2004 census figures) to 80,000 people by 2010, with an additional 7,000 to 10,000 people living in construction camps. Calgary currently sees 97 new people arrive each day, and Red Deer is growing at a rate close to the size of the town of Lacombe each year.

The Need to Plan and Act Now for the Future

Alberta must be planning and managing for future growth and other social changes now. Here are just some examples of trends today that will continue to drive housing needs:

- The number of First Nations people, and other Aboriginal people, moving into towns and cities in Alberta continues to increase in response to conditions in their communities and on many reserves. These Albertans also need affordable housing and supports.
- If our economic growth continues to 2025, Alberta could face a shortfall of 332,000 workers. Many of these workers will come from other countries and cultures and they too will need housing and supports.
- It is estimated that between 2005 and 2016, the numbers of seniors will increase by approximately 165,000. By 2031, about one in five Albertans will be seniors. (Source: Statistics Canada and Seniors and Community Supports)

Homelessness

- Alberta's homeless population is growing. Calgary's 2006 count of homeless persons revealed a 32% increase over the last two years (in 2006, the number of homeless people in Calgary reached 3,436). During the same time period, Edmonton showed an increase of 19% (in 2006, there were 2,200 homeless in Edmonton), while Fort McMurray's homeless population increased by 24% in the same two-year period.
- Smaller urban centres also have growing homeless populations. For example, in Grande Prairie, an estimated 1,100 people are homeless, the majority being men between 18 and 24 years.
- Alberta had approximately 2,500 homeless shelter spaces in 2006. The number of homeless Albertans has grown and there are often not enough shelter spaces available.

Subsidized Housing

- The effects of the lack of affordable housing are felt most acutely by Albertans who live on fixed incomes such as pensions, those that receive assistance from the government or earn a lower income.
- Wait lists to access social housing have grown and will continue to grow. In 2006, about 6,600 people were waiting for subsidized housing across all programs.
- The total number of subsidized housing units (for family housing, rent supplement and special needs housing) has remained fairly constant over the past five years at about 17,000 units in the seven major centres in Alberta and rural communities.
- In 2006, there were a total of 20,248 seniors in subsidized housing.

Affordable Rental Units

- Overall rental rates across the province have increased since 2003, with the largest increases in one-bedroom units. Average rents increased in all of Alberta's 13 major urban centres. For example, between 2005 and 2006, rental rates for a two-bedroom unit in Edmonton increased from $732 to $810. In Grande Prairie, the same size unit increased from $797 to $965, while in Wood Buffalo, it increased from $1,478 to $1,717.
- Rental units are being converted to condominium units in most of Alberta's major centres.

THE EXCEPTIONAL GROWTH AND ASSOCIATED PRESSURES IN ALBERTA HAVE

XCEEDED

THE CAPACITY TO MEET GROWING HOUSING NEEDS

- Vacancy rates in rural Alberta have decreased dramatically since 2005, with the biggest decrease in two-bedroom units in northern Alberta. The overall vacancy rate in rural Alberta in 2006 was 1.4%, a reported ten-year low.
- The apartment vacancy rate in Alberta's cities with 10,000 or more people declined from 3.1% in September 2005 to 0.9% in September 2006. Calgary's vacancy rate is projected to drop to 0.6% this year and stay that way through 2007, the lowest rate in Canada. Edmonton's vacancy rate is expected to be at 1.5% this year and 1% next year.

Affordable Home Ownership

- Although housing starts in Alberta totalled 40,487 in 2005, a 27-year high, a recent release of the new Housing Price Index for Alberta showed a 41% increase in the cost of building a home compared to the previous year. Many of these increases can be attributed to Alberta's tight labour market.
- Alberta's per capita income for 2007 is expected to reach $44,788 per year compared with the national average forecast of $34,757 per year. At the same time, the cost of living in Alberta's cities and regional centres is rising.
- Homeowners in Alberta in 2001 paid less than 30% of their annual income on housing. However, since then, Alberta's housing prices and cost of living have increased radically.
- The Consumer Price Index (CPI) is a way of measuring changes in consumer prices across Canada. In 2006, the national CPI increase was about 2%. In Alberta, it was about 3.8%. In Alberta, housing replacement costs soared 45% in December 2006 – pushing up the CPI nationally.

CURRENT SUPPORT FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING IN ALBERTA

The Government of Alberta has a number of programs and initiatives in place to address ongoing demand for homeless shelter beds, affordable housing and seniors housing, administered through the departments of Municipal Affairs and Housing and Seniors and Community Supports. The exceptional growth and associated pressures in Alberta, though, have exceeded the capacity to meet growing housing needs.
